The students are getting real on-the-job training while still working towards their high school diploma. Check out www.templewildcatmarket.com to see how you can take advantage of their offerings and support their continuing efforts.

Today is March 1, meaning it's not February 29...brilliant observation, I know. That means 2023 is a "common year." 2024 will be our next "leap year" - a calendar year which contains an additional day added to keep the calendar year synchronized with the astronomical year. Astronomical events do not repeat in a whole number of days, so static calendars inherently "drift" over time with respect to tracking things like seasons.
