PROGRAM:

September 7
Gilbert Eckrich

Gilbert spoke to us about facts vs. myths as it relates to wildlife—particularly wildlife in the Central Texas area. His expertise comes from being a wildlife biologist in Fort Hood's Natural Resources Management Branch for 22 years. His hobbies include birding and wildlife photography.

The elusive, seldom photographed, Chupacabra is a monstrous creature that attacks animals and consumes their blood. Chupacabra is a mix of "chupa"—which many of you will recognize as part of a phrase from your early lessons in Spanish street slang—from the verb "chupar" which means "to suck." Does "cabra" also sound familiar or maybe "cabrito?" You got it. Chupacabra means goat-sucker.
